

Free Compost Webinar on Wednesday July 3, 2013

Green Manitoba and the Compost Council of Canada invite you and your compost colleagues to participate in our July 3rd webinar:

Digging into Community Gardens

The third in our series of free organics recycling webinars, this session will be led by Katherine Buckley, Research Scientist in Integrated Agricultural Management with Agriculture & Agri-Food Canada. In addition to her “day job” as a compost champion and researcher, Kathy has been instrumental in nurturing the establishment of community gardens in Brandon, MB.

As you all know, the power of compost goes beyond its abilities to maximize waste diversion. Compost is all about feeding the soil and making our communities sustainable.

Please plan to attend this great, inspirational session about the how-to's of community gardening and compost's role in making them work.

Date: Wednesday July 3, 2013

Start Time: 12 Noon (Central Time)

Presentation with opportunity for Q&A discussion. Total time = 1 hour.

Cost: Free

The July 3rd webinar will focus on:

- The how-to's of starting and sustaining a community garden
- The role of composting, compost and our industry in community gardens

Please register in advance by emailing Danielle Buklis at The Compost Council of Canada: info@compost.org. Information on the connection process to participate in the July 3rd webinar will then be forwarded.

We look forward to your participation.
