COOKIE CALENDAR: DAY 10

Momofuku improves on classic chocolate chip

Compost cookie takes delicious trip through snack food aisle

ERIC VELLEND
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

The chocolate chip cookie gets dragged through the snack food aisle in this signature creation from New York pastry chef Christina Tosi. Be warned: the raw dough is just as good as the finished cookie. Adapted from Momofuku Milk Bar (2011) by Tosi. Kettle-style chips don't crumble as easily as regular chips.

on medium speed, beat butter, sugars and corn syrup until smooth. Add egg and vanilla. Beat 2 minutes. Reduce speed to low. Slowly add flour mixture until just blended. With machine running, add chocolate chips, butterscotch chips, oats and coffee. Add chips and pretzels until just blended, about 5 seconds.

Line baking sheets with parchment paper.

On 1 sheet, drop 3-tbsp (45-mL) portions of dough on trays. Flatten slightly. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour. Place chilled portions on prepared trays 3 inches (5 cm) apart.

Bake in batches on middle rack in preheated 375F (190C) oven until brown at edges and pale gold in centre, 11 to 13 minutes. Cool completely. Store in airtight container up to 1 week.

Makes about 32.
